THOUGHT TOADSTOOLS SPANISH MUSHROOMS

While after a load of gravel across the lake last week, Dave Dondero and Wm. Slotterbeck were poisoned by eating toadstools, says the Lake County Bee. The two men, with W. J. Masser, had gone after gravel in the launch Hazel. They had decided to eat a hot lunch at noon, and as there were some immense yellow toadtools growing near, they cooked and ate them, supposing them to be Spanish mushrooms.

Fortunately Masser was skeptical of the "mushrooms" and refrained from eating any of them, so that he was able to bring the poisoned men to Lakeport.

Dondero and Slotterbeck soon became nauseated, and putting them aboard the Hazel Masser brought them full speed to town.

When they arrived Slotterbeck was able to reach Dr. Nott's office unassisted, but Dondero was unconscious and in a very critical condition. Doctors Fearn and Stipp were immediately summoned, and after about a half hour of strenuous work the patient rallied sufficiently to be taken home.

Masser brought home several of the deadly fungi. They were about six inches in diameter, the tops orange yellow spotted with black warts, and the under sides dead white.

Mrs. Will Van Dyke was the guest of honor at luncheon given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. L. C Dean at her home on Grove street. The afternoon was pleasently spent with games and music and a delicate collation was served. The only thing to mar the pleasure of the afternoon was the knowledge that Mrs. Van Dyke was soon to leave for Covelo to make her home, her husband the genial tax collector having secured a ranch there and concluded to engage in farming.

The inventory of the estate of the late Chas. Hofman was filed yesterday and appraises the estate at $33,850, L. Cerf B. S. Hirsch and H. T. Hopper were appraisers.

CUPID CAPTURES POPULAR COUPLE

Miss Effie Case and H. P. Preston put one over on their friends last month and were quietly married at the home of Rev. Dickie, County Clerk Hale McCowen and Mrs. Dickie acting as witnesses. The wedding occurred on the evening of November 7 and while everyone else was interested in politics this prominent young democrat fell for one of the little god's arrows and now his friends are able to account for his seeming lack of interests in the candidates and politics.

The happy couple concealed their wedding from their friends until this week. The news leaked out however and spread like wild fire and they finally confessed and have been busy since receiving the congratulations of their friends.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. G. Case and for several years has been one of the popular teachers in the Ukiah grammar school. The groom is a member of the firm of Preston & Preston and is one of Ukiah's popular young business men. The happy couple left yesterday on their deferred honeymoon and will return to make their home in this city.

COURTHOUSE BEING PAINTED

Charles Barrick and his painters are giving the court house a coat of Spanish gray and the building now presents an entirely different appearance. The board is to be congratulated that they did not have the building painted red and then striped brick fashion. If the pillars in front of the hall of records and jail were now painted and the broken and missing chimney tops fixed up the square would present a very neat appearance.

OFFICERS SECURE PERSONAL BONDS

The surety companies in the state seem to have combined and attempted this year to hold the county officers up for an exorbitant sum on their bonds. George Johnson, county treasure, returned from Fort Bragg yesterday and had completed his $100,000 bond. He secured it in Ukiah Willits and Fort Bragg and could have gotten double the ammount if he had needed it. Sheriff Ralph Byrnes furnished a pesonal bond of $15,000 and got it in Ukiah principally. Corner John Taylor also furnished a personal bond.

Christmas is rapidly approaching and the store windows are filled with things to tempt the money from the Christmas shoppers pocket. By consulting the ads in the Press shoppers will find a great many hints for Christmas presents.

Gene Hopkins was down from Potter last week to meet Clair Smith who recently returned from Imperial valley. The boys are still interested in a large ranch there and so far it is the only place there where artesian water has been found and it is naturally very valuable on that account as water is all that is needed in that country to make things grow.

Taxidermist Trouslot and son of Redwood valley were down Wednesday and report that they have another cinnamon bear to mount. It weighed 560 pounds and was killed near Sherwood by Dutch Hill. A beautiful specimen of porcupine was trapped by Jim Lane in the vineyard on the old Dr. Dickinson place and will be mounted and placed on exhibition in this city in a few weeks.

The state board of pharmacy has had private detectives over the county for the past month who have been inducing the physicians and druggists to break the law in order that they might have cases. The result has been that most of the druggists have paid fines. The proposition of inducing a man to break the law and then arrest him may be a good scheme but it does appear that it would be better to find out and prosecute those who have been breaking the law.

THE town board should either put more water in the streets and make them thinner or more thickening in and make them thicker. At present they are just betwixt and between and are of a consistency that pulls off your rubbers and makes walking such a painstaking operation that one is compelled to forgo the pleasure of viewing the scenery for watching his feet to see that they don't stick altogether. When the stone crossings were in and the mud was scraped off them occasionally walking was so pleasant that some of the citizens may have over worked the job and worn out some of the cement sidewalks, but even though they did the town board should remember that the people must do something and that walking is about the only thing that don't cost much. But, walking does keep the money in circulation. If shoes are worn out more must be bought; ditto sidewalks; frequent walking and new shoes causes corns, which means money for doctors and druggists; if the walking is particularly nice and many women pass the men will all strain their eyes rubbering and the occulists will profit, and so on ad infinitum or something similar. In conclusion it may be suggested that if the members of the town board enjoy tramping over streets in their present condition that they reserve a back street for their own use and fix up one for the other people.

IN the space of one year the postal deficit has been decreased eleven and a half millions; and is now less than six millions. During this time 1500 new postoffices were established and 515 new rural routes serving 12,235 miles. The great trouble with the postal defict has been to find out just where the shortage was. Postmaster General Hitchcock claims that if the magazines were compelled to pay the government what it costs to carry their advertising pages the department would soon be able to make a one cent rate on letters. No recommendation is made to increase the rate on reading matter as this would be an unjust hardship on the people. The burden should be placed where it belongs---on the advertisers. The people would then receive the benefit.

THE great need of Mendocino county is more people. We have the land and the climate and the opportunity. The extension of the railroad to Eureka will undoubtedly help by the opening of many acres of land to railroad communication with the outside world and incidently to settlers. It is not so much the man with money that we need, while a few of the moneyed class of course would not hurt, as the man with a family who will become a producer. Mendocino county has made a steady gain in the last decade but the next ten years should see our population double. Remember that the Panama Pacific Exposition for San Francisco would be a great help alomg this line.

IT is figured that the railroad profits cost the average family about $130 a year. While we do not beleive in the oppression of the railroad we believe that so long as they are able to pay large dividends on heavily watered stock that they could stand a reduction in rates. The railroads the same as any one else should be permitted to make a reasonable profit on their money invested, and the government should see that they do not over step this line.

EDITOR Loring of the Willits News has purchased the plant of the Little Lake Herald and combined the plants and Willits now has only paper. It was the same old story of the survival of the fittest. The territory was too limited for the support of two papers. With the increased patronage Editor Loring will now be able to give the people of Willits a good live paper and become an important factor in boosting Northern Mendocino.

AN examination of the stock books of the rubber trust by a New York World reporter is said to have shown that Nelson A. Aldrich is a heavy stockholder despite his public denial. The banishing of such men as Aldrich from politics is the best thing that can happen to the common people of the United States. Newspaper publicity is the route by which they will be exiled.

A Fair Sized Trout.

The gentleman was strolling across a large estate when he came upon a man fishing. "What sort of fish do you catch here?" he said.

"Mostly trout," replied the man.

"How many have you caught?"

"About ten or twelve, sir."

"What is about the heaviest you have caught?" continued the gentleman.

"Well, I don't know the weight, but the water sunk two or three feet when I pulled it out!"

Divides the Waters.

Situated exactly at the highest point of the divide of the Rocky mountains, on the Crow's Nest division of the Canadian Pacific railway, in British Columbia, is a hotel. When it rains in the mountains the water which falls on the eastern slope of the hotel roof trickles away to join a tiny rivulet, which in due time mingles its waters with the Atlantic. The water falling just beyond the ridgepole, on the other side of the roof, flows westerly and ultimately into the Pacific.

Lots of Them.

"There is one thing which has rather puzzled me."

"What is that?"

"When money talks does it always talk cents?"—Baltimore American.

His Argument.

"Dear, I only play poker for fun."

"But you bet, don't you?"

"Well, there wouldn't be any fun without a little betting."—Pittsburg Post.

The Split Log Drag

BY F. C. HANDY.

The improvement of the country roads is a problem that is now before the people of this county, and this particular section, and there is a whole lot to be said against the expensive method of working the roads with the four horse scrapers, which means filling the mudholes with dollars, without any permanent results, and doing the same work every year.

It is not the water that falls on a road that hurts it, but the water that stands on it is what does the damage, and the problem is to find out the cheapest means or method or tool by which a road may be worked, so that it will shed the water of the next rain. To accomplish this is to smooth the surface of the road while moist, so that it will offer to the next rain-fall a gently convex contour, hard enough to shed the water, with no ruts or holes to act as troughs to hold the water, and the split log drag will do this smoothing plane act as perfectly as a $1,000.00 machine will do, and pack the road surface while smoothing it.

A piece of dragged road will do its own talking, and if every farmer will make a split log drag and drag the road from his own gate to that of his neighbor, he does not need to worry about what his neighbor will do.

To make this drag, take two halves of a split log, nine feet long and about 12 inches thick, set on edge 30 inches apart, with both flat sides to the front. These two halves are connected together by cross stakes, so that both halves are parallel to each other, and the back half to lie 16 inches nearer the center of the road-way than the front one, giving what is known as "set back." A platform of 1 inch boards held together by three cleats should be placed on the stakes between the slabs, spaced at least an inch apart, to allow any dirt that may heap up to fall through upon the road again. The front slab may be shod with a strip of iron about 42 inches long by 4 inches wide and 1-4 of an inch thick. The chain by which the drag is drawn is wrapped around the stake that is furthest from the ditch end of the drag and the other end fastened to an eye about three inches from the other end of the drag. The distance that the double tree is attached from the drag has much to do with the amount of bite that is given the drag, and if the doubletree is a considerable distance from the drag, the latter will gather and move more dirt. The driver, by shifting his weight on the drag can make it do many different things.

It is impossible to express in figures even a general estimate of the value of the revolution in roadmaking, that would result from the use of this simple method. Practically all of the roads in California are dirt roads; the split log drag not only evens up and fills in the holes and ruts, but at the same time it packs the earth. Another valuable result of dragging is the reduction of dust, for the particles of clay cohere so tenaciously that there is but little wear when the surface is smooth. Dust on an earth road is due to the breaking up under traffic of the frayed and upturned edges of ruts and hoof prints. If the surface is smoothed after each rain and the road dries hard and even, no edges are exposed to crushing and the only dust which forms is that due to actual wear of the road surface. With the drag, the road can be worked right through the winter; with the expensive grader or other road machinery, you will find that it is necessary to wait until after the heavy rains are over and along in the spring of the year. The drag does its work best when the soil is moist and not sticky, as the earth then moves freely along the faces of the slabs; in fact if the roadway is very badly rutted and full of holes, it is best to use the drag once when the ground is slushy. The drag, if properly handled does not put enough dirt in the middle of the road to drive traffic to one side; it does not force tracking or ruts, but distributs traffic over its whole surface, which results in packing and solidifying the road all over. Smoothing with the drag leads to packing the surface, and the longer it is kept smooth, the harder it packs. Everyone almost, is willing to admit, without argument, that the poorest thing in our civilization is the average country road. If we can get the farmers to take a pride in their roads, the longest step has been taken, and this can be accomplished with the split log drag, which is so simple and so inexpensive that every farmer can afford to have one along with his farming implements. The dragging of the road can be done in the winter time, between storms, and when he has plenty of spare time and his teams need excercising.

In many of the states, such as New York, Pennsylvania, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Arkansas and others, the split log drag has been used extensively and thousands of miles of unimproved country roads have been transformed into good roads, open and passable 12 months of the year.

IN MEMORIUM

Now that the customary tributes have been paid to the memory of Mrs. Emelia Ganter the writer craves just a word. Next morning after her gentle spirit had winged its way to her Heavenly home, there was a hush in every home, and in every group, when it was whispered that Emelia Anker was no more. And the children on their way to school with bated breath told it to their playmates that Emelia Anker was dead. A stranger in the hotel asked who Emelia Anker was, and was told it was the name of an angel who for many years had made her home in our little town. The writer has known her since childhood and does not wonder that the head gardener has transplanted this rare plant to a more genial clime. S.

CHAPTER II.

IT had been a forlorn hope at best, this attempt of his to escape Kellogg—Duncan acknowledged it when, his packing rudely finished, he started for the door, Robbins reluctantly surrendering the suit case after exhausting his repertory of devices to delay the young man. But at that instant the elevator gate clashed in the outer corridor and Kellogg's key rattled in the lock, to an accompanying confusion of voices, all masculine and all very cheerful.

Duncan sighed and motioned Robbins away with his luggage. "No hope now," he told himself. "But—O Lord!"

Incontinently there burst into the room four men—Jim Long, Larry Miller, another whom Duncan did not immediately recognize and Kellogg himself—bringing with them an atmosphere breezy with jubilation. Before he knew it Duncan was boisterously overwhelmed. He got his breath to find Kellogg pumping his hand.

"Nat," he was saying, "you're the only other man on earth I was wishing could be with me tonight! Now my happiness is complete. Gad, this is lucky!"

"You think so?" countered Duncan, forcing a smile. "Hello, you boys!" He gave a hand to Long and Miller. "How're you all?" He warmed to their friendly faces and unfeigned welcome. "My, but it's good to see you!" There was relief in the fact that Kellogg, after a single glance, forebore to question his return; he was to be counted upon for tact, was Kellogg. Now he strangled surprise by turning to the fourth member of the party.

"Nat," he said, "I want you to meet Mr. Bartlett. Mr. Bartlett, Mr. Duncan."

A wholesome smile dawned on Duncan's face as he encountered the blank blue stare of a young man whose very smooth and very bright red face was admirably set off by semi-evening dress. "Great Scott!" he cried, warmly pressing the lackadaisical hand that drifted into his. "Willy Bartlett—after all these years!"

A sudden animation replaced the vacuous stare of the blue eyes. "Duncan!" he stammered. "I say, this is rippin'!"

"As bad as that?" Duncan essayed an accent almost English and nodded his appreciation of it, something which Bartlett missed completely.

He was very young—a very great deal younger, Duncan thought, than when they had been classmates, what time Duncan shared his rooms with Kellogg, very much younger and suffering exquisitely from oversophistication. His drawl barely escaped being inimitable. His air did not escape it. "Smitten with my old trouble," Duncan appraised him—"too much money. Heaven knows I hope he never recovers!"

As for Willy, he was momentarily more nearly human than he had seemed from the moment of his first appearance. "You know," he blurted, "this is simply extraordinary. I say, you chaps, Duncan and I haven't met for years, not since he graduated. We belong to the same frat, you know, and had a jolly time of it, if he was an upper class man. No side about him at all, y' know, absolutely none whatever. Whenever I had to go out on a spree I'd always get Nat to show me round."

"I was pretty good at that," Duncan admitted, a trifle ruefully.

But Willy rattled on heedless. "He knew more pretty gels, y' know. I say, old chap, d'you know as many now?"

Duncan shook his head. "The list has shrunk. I'm a changed man, Willy."

"Ow, I say, you're chawfin," Willy argued incredulously. "I don't believe that, y' know, hardly. I say, you remember the night you showed me how to play faro bank?"

"I'll never forget it," Duncan told him gravely. "And I remember what a plug we thought my roommate was because he wouldn't come with us." He nodded significantly toward the amused Kellogg.

"Not him!" cried Willy, expostulant. "Not really? Why, it cawn't be!"

"Fact," Duncan assured him. "He was working his way through college, you see, whereas I was working my way through my allowance and then some. That's why you never met him. Willy, he worked and got the habit. We loafed with the same result. That's why he's useful and you're ornamental and I'm"— He broke off in surprise. "Hello," he said as Robbins offered a tray to the three on which were slim stemmed glasses filled with a pale yellow effervescent liquid. "Why the blond waters of excitement, please?" he inquired, accepting a glass.

KELLOGG FORBORE TO QUESTION HIS RETURN.

From across the room Larry Miller's voice sounded. "Are you ready, gentlemen? We'll drink to him first, and then he can drink to his royal little self. To the boy who's getting on in the world! To the junior member of L. J. Bartlett & Co.!"

Long applauded loudly, "Hear, hear!" and even Willy Bartlett chimed in with an unemotional, "Good work!" Mechanically Duncan downed the toast. Kellogg was the only man not drinking it, and from that the meaning was easily to be inferred. With a stride Duncan caught his hand and crushed it in his own.

"Harry," he said a little huskily, "I can't tell you how glad I am. It's the best news I've had in years."

Kellogg's responsive pressure was answer enough. "It makes it doubly worth while to win out and have you all so glad," he said.

"So you've taken him into the firm, eh?" Duncan inquired of Bartlett.

The blue eyes widened stonily. "The governor has. I'm not in the business, y' know. Never had the slightest turn for it, what?" Willy set aside his glass. "I say, I must be moving. No, I cawn't stop, Kellogg, really. I was dressin' at the club and Larry told me about it, so I just dropped round to tell you how jolly glad I am."

"Your father hadn't told you, then?"

"Who, the governor?" Willy looked unutterably bored. "Why, he gave up tryin' to talk business with me long ago. I can't get interested in it, 'pon my word. Of course I knew he thought the deuce and all of you, but I hadn't an idea they were goin' to take you into the firm. What?"

Long and Miller interrupted, proposing adieus which Kellogg vainly contended.

"Why, you're only just here"— he expostulated.

"Cawn't help it, old chap," Willy assured him earnestly. "I must go, anyway. I've a dinner engagement."

"You'll be late, won't you?"

"Doesn't matter in the least. I'm always late. Night, Kellogg. Congratulations again."

"We just dropped round to take off our hats to you," Long continued, pumping Kellogg's hand.

"And tell you what a good fellow we think you are," added Miller, following suit.

"You don't know how good you make me feel," Kellogg told them.

Under cover of this diversion Duncan was making one last effort to slip away, but before he could gather together his impedimenta and get to the door Willy Bartlett intercepted him.

"I say, Duncan"—

"Oh, rats!" said Duncan beneath his breath. He paused ungraciously enough.

"We've got to see a bit of one another, now we've met again, y' know. Wish you'd look me up. Half Moon club 'll get me most any time. We'll have to arrange to make a regular old fashioned night of it, just for memory's sake."

Duncan nodded, edging past him. "I've memories enough," he said.

"Right-oh! Any reason at all, y' know, just so we have the night."

"Good enough," assented Duncan vaguely. He suffered his hand to be wrung with warmth. "I'll not forget. Good night." Then he pulled up and groaned, for Willy's insistence had frustrated his design. Kellogg had suddenly become alive to his attitude and hailed him over the heads of Long and Miller.

"Nat, I say! Where the devil are you going?"

"Over to the hotel," said Duncan.

"The deuce you are! What hotel?"

"The one I'm stopping at."

"Not on your life. You're not going just yet. I haven't had half a chance to talk to you. Robbins, take Mr. Duncan's things."

Duncan, set upon by Robbins, who had been hovering round for just that purpose, lifted his shoulders in resignation, turning back into the room as Miller and Long said good night to him and left at Bartlett's heels, and smiled awry in semi-humorous deprecation of the way in which he let Kellogg outmaneuver him. When it came to that it was hard to refuse Kellogg anything; he had that way with him, especially if one liked him. And how could any one help liking him?

Kellogg had him now, holding him fast by either shoulder, at arm's length, and shaking a reproving head at his friend. "You big duffer!" he said. "Did you think for a minute I'd let you throw me down like that? Have you dined?"

At this suggestion Duncan stiffened and fell back. "No, but"—

Kellogg swept the ground from under his feet. "Robbins," he told the man, "order in dinner for two from the club, and tell 'em to hurry it up."

"Yes, sir," said Robbins, and flew to obey before Duncan could get a chance to countermand his part in the order.

"And now," continued Kellogg, "we've got the whole evening before us in which to chin. Sit down." He led Duncan to an armchair and gently but firmly plumped him into its capacious depths. "We'll have a snug little dinner here and what do you say to taking in a show afterward?"

"I say no."

"You dassent, my boy. This is the night we celebrate. I'm feeling pretty good tonight."

"You ought to, Harry." Duncan struggled to rouse himself to share in the spirit of gratulation with which Kellogg was bubbling. "I'm mighty glad, old man. It's a great step up for you."

"It's all of that. You could have knocked me over with a feather when Bartlett sprang it on me this morning. Of course, I was expecting something, a boost in salary, or something like that. Bartlett knew that other houses in the street had made me offers. I've been pretty lucky of late and pulled off one or two rather big deals, but a partnership with L. J. Bartlett—Think of it, Nat!"

"I'm thinking of it, and it's great."

"It'll keep me mighty busy," Kellogg blundered blindly on. "It means a lot of extra work, but you know I like to work."

"That's right, you do," agreed Duncan drearily. "It's queer to me. It must be a great thing to like to work."

"You bet it's a great thing. Why, I couldn't exist if I couldn't work. You remember that time I laid off for a month in the country for my health's sake? I'll never forget it—hanging round all the time with my hands empty—every one else with something to do. I wouldn't go through with it again for a fortune. Never felt so useless and in the way"—

"But," interrupted Duncan, knitting his brows as he grappled with this problem, "you were independent, weren't you? You had money—could pay your board?"

"Of course. Nevertheless I felt in the way."

"That's funny."

"It's straight."

"I know it is. It wouldn't be you if you didn't love work. It wouldn't be me if I did. Look here, Harry. Suppose you didn't have any money and couldn't pay your board and had nothing to do. How'd you feel in that case?"

"I don't know. Anyhow that's rot"—

"No, it isn't rot. I'm trying to make you understand how I feel when—when it's that way with me, as it generally is." He raised one hand and let it fall with a gesture of despondency so eloquent that it roused Kellogg out of his own preoccupation.

"Why, Nat!" he cried, genuinely sympathetic. "I've been so taken up with myself that I forgot. I hadn't looked for you till tomorrow."

"You knew, then?"

"I met Atwater at lunch today. He told me. Said he was sorry, but"—

"Yes, everybody is always sorry, but"—

Kellogg let his hand fall on Duncan's shoulder. "I'm sorry, too, old man. But don't lose heart. I know it's pretty tough on a fellow"—

"The toughest part of it is that you got the job for me, and I had to fall down."

"Don't think of that. It's not your fault"—

"You're the only man who believes that, Harry."

"Buck up. I'll stumble across some better opening for you before long, and"—

"Stop right there. I'm through"—

"Don't talk that way, Nat. I'll get you in right somewhere."

"You're the best hearted man alive, Harry, but I'll see you blasted first."

"Wait." Kellogg demanded his attention. "Here's this man Burnham. You don't know him, but he's as keen as they make 'em. He's on the track of some wonderful scheme for making illuminating gas from crude oil. If it goes through, if the invention's really practicable, it's bound to work a revolution. He's down in Washington now—left this afternoon to look up the patents. Now, he needs me to get the ear of the Standard Oil people, and I'll get you in there."

"What right 've you go to do that?" demanded Duncan. "What the dickens do I know about illuminating gas or crude oil? Burnham 'd never thank you for the likes o' me."

"But, thunder, you can learn. All you need"—

"Now, see here, Harry!" Duncan gave him pause with a manner not to be denied. "Once and for all time understand I'm through having you recommend an incompetent just because we're friends."

"But, Harry"—

"And I'm through living on you while I'm out of a job. That's final."

"But, man, listen to me—when we were at college"—

"That was another matter."

"How many times did you pay the room rent when I was strapped? How many times did your money pull me through when I'd have had to quit and forfeit my degree because I couldn't earn enough to keep on?"

"That's different. You earned enough finally to square up. You don't owe me anything."

"I owe you the gratitude for the friendly hand that put me in the way of earning—that kept me going when the going was rank. Besides, the conditions are just reversed now; you'll do just as I did—make good in the world and, when it's convenient, to me. As for living here, you're perfectly welcome."

"I know it—and more," Duncan assented a little wearily. "Don't think I don't appreciate all you've done for me. But I know and you must understand that I can't keep on living on you—and I won't."

For once baffled, Kellogg stared at him in consternation. Duncan met his gaze steadily, strong in the sincerity

"I do."

"Then that's settled."

"Yes, that's settled."

"Dinner," said Robbins from the doorway, "is served."

MADE GOOD AS A COOK.

The Old Lumberman Got Supper Without the Least Effort.

"Nowadays a cook is provided for each camp," said the old lumberman who has worked on the St. Croix, the Penobscot and the St. John, "but in my days of lumbering we took turns, a week at a time, or one man would make all the bread, another the tea and coffee, and so on through the bill of fare. Once in awhile—generally before they'd got licked into their reg'lar winter mold—some fellow would kick against the routine; 'he's been hired to do something else,' or 'he'd be hanged if he'd cook, anyhow.' Then there were ructions.

"I remember one little rebellion that began hot and roaring and died down into a laugh all round, thanks to an ingenious old soul, all quiet good nature and fat—Uncle Ned, we called him.

"We got back to camp one night to find the fire nearly out and nothing ready for supper. We were all hungry—and grouty, as sometimes happens in the best regulated crews. Each in turn declared he wouldn't be cook, and it looked like a supperless night till Uncle Ned spoke up in his quiet way.

"'Dear me,' says he, 'what a time about cooking! Why, it's the easiest thing in nature to get supper. Now, boys, if you'll all wait on me I'll be cook.'

"They all agreed. This being settled, Uncle Ned sat down on a spruce chair and let his assistants have it.

"'Now, Dick,' said he, 'the first thing for you to do is to get a little wood and start up the fire.'

"'Isaac, just step down to the brook and fetch a pail of water.

"'You, Mac, while the fire's getting under way, wash a few potatoes and get 'em ready to put on when the pot boils.

"'Now, Jake, you cut a few slices of pork and put it on over the fire to fry.'

"'But, Uncle Ned,' we all shouted together, 'you was to get supper!'

"'Yes,' said he, calm and easy as ever, 'I was to get supper, but you were to wait upon me. Tom,' said he, 'you'd better get the dishes ready.'

"We kicked some, but 'twas no use; we'd agreed to wait on him if he'd be cook.

"When everything was ready for supper, there the old man still sat in his spruce chair—hadn't stirred an inch!

"'Dear me, dear me,' said he, 'here I have got supper, and 'twas one o' the easiest things in the world.'

"We were 'caught,'" smiled the old lumberman, "and we sat down to supper in good temper, and ever afterward we had Uncle Ned's proposition for a byword; we'd agree to do any living thing provided we could be 'waited upon.'"—Youth's Companion.

Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and fairest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of woman is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is female weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as sacredly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R.V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.

Up to James.

An official was describing, at a dinner at Washington, an unfair law.

"The people under this law," he said, "are very much in the position of a young Washington attache. As the attache was breakfasting the other morning his servant said to him: 'You are out of whisky, sir. Shall I get a bottle?'

"'Yes, I think you might, James,' the other replied. 'It's your turn.'"—Washington Star.

The Poor Man's Gym.

"Would you mind telling me," asked Mrs. Bourdalot, glancing admiringly at the athletic shoulders of the prospective boarder, "how you keep in such splendid physical condition?"

"I go through a few gymnastic exercises every morning," confessed the young man, flushing.

"Well, I'm sorry, but we can't board you. I've had the bathroom monopolized that way before."—Kansas City Times.

AWARDED TWO PRIZES

It is not generally known that V. R. Herbert, proprietor of the Westside Fruit Farm, was awarded more than one prize at the Watsonville Apple Association Annual. Besides having in possession a certificate for one first prize, he also has one for a second prize, and this goes to show what Mendocino county could do, if people having small orchards would give them proper care, says the Mendocino Beacon. Mr. Herbert has about twenty-five acres of as fine an orchard as can be found anywhere, and with regular spraying he has kept out most of the diseases and pests usually found in orchards of any size; and not only this, he was the originator of "Guaranteed Free From Worms" on every box, and others in that section are following in his steps, they too can "guarantee" their apples. Shipping at Westside Fruit Farm was finished last week, and this seasons output was somewhat lower than last, something like 1000 boxes were shipped this season, against about 1400 last season.

THOUGHT TOADSTOOLS SPANISH MUSHROOMS

While after a load of gravel across the lake last week, Dave Dondero and Wm. Slotterbeck were poisoned by eating toadstools, says the Lake County Bee. The two men, with W. J. Masser, had gone after gravel in the launch Hazel. They had decided to eat a hot lunch at noon, and as there were some immense yellow toadtools growing near, they cooked and ate them, supposing them to be Spanish mushrooms.

Fortunately Masser was skeptical of the "mushrooms" and refrained from eating any of them, so that he was able to bring the poisoned men to Lakeport.

Dondero and Slotterbeck soon became nauseated, and putting them aboard the Hazel Masser brought them full speed to town.

When they arrived Slotterbeck was able to reach Dr. Nott's office unassisted, but Dondero was unconscious and in a very critical condition. Doctors Fearn and Stipp were immediately summoned, and after about a half hour of strenuous work the patient rallied sufficiently to be taken home.

Masser brought home several of the deadly fungi. They were about six inches in diameter, the tops orange yellow spotted with black warts, and the under sides dead white.

Miss Effie Case and H. P. Preston put one over on their friends last month and were quietly married at the home of Rev. Dickie, County Clerk Hale McCowen and Mrs. Dickie acting as witnesses. The wedding occurred on the evening of November 7 and while everyone else was interested in politics this prominent young democrat fell for one of the little god's arrows and now his friends are able to account for his seeming lack of interests in the candidates majorities.

The happy couple concealed their wedding from their friends until this week. The news leaked out however and spread like wild fire and they finally confessed and have been busy since receiving the congratulations of their friends.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. G. Case and for several years has been one of the popular teachers in the Ukiah grammar school. The groom is a member of the firm of Preston & Preston and is one of Ukiah's popular young business men. The happy couple left yesterday on their deferred honeymoon and will return to make their home in this city.

MENDOCINO PEOPLE WEDDED

Last Saturday, Miss Emma Lempke and Horace Weller were married in San Francisco by Rev. Barlingame of the first Baptist church. They will make their home in South San Francisco, San Mateo county. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Lempke of this city and is one of the county's popular teachers. The groom is a Fort Bragg boy and for some time has been in the lumber business in San Francisco with his brother-in-law, Abbie P. Scott. The many friends of the bride and groom in this county will wish them success and a long and happy wedded life.

COURTHOUSE BEING PAINTED

Charles Barrick and his painters are giving the court house a coat of Spanish gray and the building now presents an entirely different appearance. The board is to be congratulated that they did not have the building painted red and then striped brick fashion. If the pillars in front of the hall of records and jail were now painted and the broken and missing chimney tops fixed up the square would present a very neat appearance.

OFFICERS SECURE PERSONAL BONDS

The surety companies in the state seem to have combined and attempted this year to hold the county officers up for an exorbitant sum on their bonds. George Johnson, county treasure, returned from Fort Bragg yesterday and had completed his $100,000 bond. He secured it in Ukiah Willits and Fort Bragg and could have gotten double the ammount if he had needed it. Sheriff Ralph Byrnes furnished a pesonal bond of $15,000 and got it in Ukiah principally. Corner John Taylor also furnished a personal bond.

Dr. McCowen reports the rainfall for the week as .20 making the season 5.06 inches, This is 8.03 inches short of last season

R. T. Hutsdll was over from Boonville this week on a business visit.

PERSONAL MENTION LOCAL HAPPENINGS

L. Finne and Will Finne were down from Calpella this week on a business visit.

Perle Crawford and Frank Lowe of Largo were in Potter last week on a hunting trip.

S. B. Campbell is the proud father of a son born Friday. The little fellow and his mother are doing nicely.

John Guntley and family were over from Wendling this week and visited their ranch on the Potter road.

Dave Wellman, one of the staunch young Republicans of the county, was down from Calpella yesterday.

About eighty went to Petaluma to attend the poultry show. It is reported to have been a very creditable affair.

Mrs. Curtis Crawford of Largo is visiting in Berkeley. Curtis will join her this week for a few days in the bay cities.

Town taxes will be delinquent on the 26th day of this month. T. M. Cleland is the tax collector and has offices at his store.

Charley Palmer, Will Lynch, Jarvis Mazetta and Ben Barri of Point Arena were in town last week on a business visit.

Attorney Hale is laid up this week with a swoolen eye. He says that he got stung. The insect was not located but Hale is getting better.

Warren Major Fugitt is reported to be negotiating for the purchase of the Mendocino State hospital. It was a ten pound girl and arrived yesterday afternoon.

E. M. Downing came down from Laytonville Wednesday and stated that he was on his way to San Francisco to spend the winter. His wife is already in the city.

A rig stolen from a Healdsburg stableman was located in Hopland Monday. It had been left there by the man who rented it and a loan of $2 secured on it.

Don Van Zant and Frank Mane were arrested by Game Wardens Miller and Lee this week and plead guilty to violations of the game laws and paid a fine of $50 each.

Raymond Hill and party of friends of Willits who have been hunting on Elk creek, returned last week and report having killed three bear and one panther.

Last week the court of appeal affirmed the judgment in the case of the California National bank v T. J. Weldon in the litigation over the lost Melton check. Mr. Weldon will ask for a rehearing.

Ralph Duncan has bought the Mum Reid drug store at Willits and took possession last week. Ralph is one of the Ukiah boys who is making good and will undoubtedly build up a good business in Willits.

Mrs. A. L. Gibson was taken to San Francisco Saturday and operated on for appendicitis. She had been ill a few days but was in a very critical condition. She is doing as nicely as could be expected after the operation however.

Christmas is rapidly approaching and the store windows are filled with things to tempt the money from the Christmas shoppers pocket. By consulting the ads in the Press shoppers will find a great many hints for Christmas presents.

Gene Hopkins was down from Potter last week to meet Clair Smith who recently returned from Imperial valley. The boys are still interested in a large ranch there and so far it is the only place there where artesian water has been found and it is naturally very valuable on that account as water is all that is needed in that country to make things grow.

Taxidermist Trouslot and son of Redwood valley were down Wednesday and report that they have another cinnamon bear to mount. It weighed 560 pounds and was killed near Sherwood by Dutch Hill. A beautiful specimen of porcupine was trapped by Jim Lane in the vineyard on the old Dr. Dickinson place and will be mounted and placed on exhibition in this city in a few weeks.

The state board of pharmacy has had private detectives over the county for the past month who have been inducing the physicians and druggists to break the law in order that they might have cases. The result has been that most of the druggists have paid fines. The proposition of inducing a man to break the law and then arrest him may be a good scheme but it does appear that it would be better to find out and prosecute those who have been breaking the law.

IN MEMORIUM

Now that the customary tributes have been paid to the memory of Mrs. Emelia Ganter the writer craves just a word. Next morning after her gentle spirit had winged its way to her Heavenly home, there was a hush in every home, and in every group, when it was whispered that Emelia Anker was no more. And the children on their way to school with bated breath told it to their playmates that Emelia Anker was dead. A stranger in the hotel asked who Emelia Anker was, and was told it was the name of an angel who for many years had made her home in our little town. The writer has known her since childhood and does not wonder that the head gardener has transplanted this rare plant to a more genial clime. S.

Not Sisters

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and fairest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of woman is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no red cheeks and round form where there is female weakness.

Women who have suffered from this trouble have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, or habit-forming drugs is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Any sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as sacredly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N.Y.

An official was describing, at a dinner at Washington, an unfair law.

"The people under this law," he said, "are very much in the position of a young Washington attache. As the attache was breakfasting the other morning his servant said to him: 'You are out of whisky, sir. Shall I get a bottle?'

"'Yes, I think you might, James,' the other replied. 'It's your turn.'"—Washington Star.

AWARDED TWO PRIZES

It is not generally known that V. R. Herbert, proprietor of the Westside Fruit Farm, was awarded more than one prize at the Watsonville Apple Association Annual. Besides having in possession a certificate for one first prize, he also has one for a second prize, and this goes to show what Mendocino county could do, if people having small orchards would give them proper care, says the Mendocino Beacon. Mr. Herbert has about twenty-five acres of as fine an orchard as can be found anywhere, and with regular spraying he has kept out most of the diseases and pests usually found in orchards of any size; and not only this, he was the originator of "Guaranteed Free From Worms" on every box, and others in that section are following in his steps, they too can "guarantee" their apples. Shipping at Westside Fruit Farm was finished last week, and this seasons output was somewhat lower than last, something like 1000 boxes were shipped this season, against about 1400 last season.
